Connecting to Hawaii FYI from your home or office computer

You can connect to Hawaii FYI with either an IBM-PC compatible or Apple Macintosh computer and an industry-standard modem.

You don't need special software, but Hawaii FYI is more colorful and graphic with emulation software. The software is available at participating computer stores in Hawaii including Software Library and ComputerLand.

Ask for:

CTLink (for IBM-compatibles or Macintosh)

Quorum (for IBM-compatibles)

Tam-Tam (for Macintosh)

When you use these packages the function keys on your computer will help you navigate through the Hawaii FYI menus and services. Use the charts to help you get around.

You may also be able to use your own communications software that came with your modem or that you purchased separately, if it will emulate a VT100 or VT102E terminal. This type of emulation provides text only screens.

1

Using your communications software, set up the communications parameters (data bits, parity, etc.) as described on page 8.

2

Activate your modem and call the number for your island.

3

Press the Enter key twice quickly when the "connect" message appears.

Configure your communication software to the following settings:

Data bits: 8

Parity: None

Stop bits: 1

Duplex: Full

Echo: Off

Terminal emulation: VT100 or VT102E

Modem speed:

1200/2400/9600 Baud

From your computer, call one of these numbers:

Oahu: 536-7133

Big Island: 935-7133

Mauai: 242-7133

Hawaii: 245-7133

Molokai and Lanai:

1-800-243-7133

When your screen displays a "connect" message, press your Enter key twice or more to complete the connection. You are now connected to Hawaii FYI. Easy-to-follow instructions on your screen will guide you the rest of the way.
